LONG RUNS IN LONDON AND NEW YORK

THE definition of a long run in the theatre must always be somewhat arbitrary, as opinions will differ on what constitutes such a run. For the purposes of this record, a play is considered to have had a long run if it has reached a total of 100 consecutive performances before 1939, or 250 consecutive performances after that date in the same city, while substantially under the same management. Such a run is not held to have been broken by the play being immediately transferred to another theatre, or being interrupted by the exigencies of strikes, wars, illness, holidays, etc. The run of a play is not here held to be long if it is taken on an out-of-town tour between two appearances in London or New York; under such conditions, any second run of the play is counted as a revival.

The following lists give first those London productions which have achieved a run of over 500 performances; productions up to 1939 with runs of 100 or more; and productions since that date with runs greater than 250; similar figures are then given for the New York stage.

A SHORT HISTORY

- 1848 The first concrete suggestion for the establishment of a National Theatre is put forward by Effingham Wilson, a London publisher.
- 1903 Plans are formulated in a book written by Harley Granville Barker and William Archer.
- 1910 The Archer-Barker scheme is combined with another movement already afoot to provide a national memorial to William Shakespeare—hence the official name of the new body—the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre Committee.
- 1946 The Joint Council of the National Theatre and the Old Vic is set up.
- 1949 The National Theatre Bill is passed through both Houses of Parliament without a division. By this Act the government of the day is empowered to contribute up to one million pounds towards the building and equipment of the theatre. The date of its implementation, however, is left to the discretion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer.
- 1951 A foundation stone is laid by the Queen Mother, on a site adjacent to the Festival Hall.
- 1952 It is agreed with the LCC that the National Theatre should occupy a better site, adjoining County Hall.
- 1958 Laurence Olivier appointed a trustee of the National Theatre.
- 1961 The Chancellor, in association with the LCC, declares himself ready to consider a scheme which would include the re-housing of Sadler's Wells in an opera house under the same roof as the National Theatre.
- July 1962 The National Theatre Board is appointed by the Chancellor. An agreement is reached with the Governors of the Old Vic, whereby the Old Vic Theatre becomes the temporary home of the National Theatre. The Chancellor also sets up the South Bank Theatre and Opera House Board to design and build the National Theatre and the new Opera House on two separate South Bank sites made available by the LCC between Hungerford Bridge and County Hall.
- Aug. 1962 Laurence Olivier appointed Director of the National Theatre.
- Oct. 1963 Inaugural production: Hamlet.
- Nov. 1963 Denys Lasdun appointed architect of both the Opera House and the National Theatre.

WHO'S WHO IN THE THEATRE

- Mar. The South Bank Board decide to go forward with the building of the National Theatre at a capital cost estimated at £7½ million, the Government and the Greater London Council having agreed to provide up to £3½ million each. No decision taken about the new Opera House.
- July The Government having stated that they will not contribute to the cost of building the Opera House on the South Bank, and the GLC having also stated that they will not contribute unless the Government provide an equal share, no real hope remains that the Opera House will be built.
- 1967 The GLC have therefore proposed, and the South Bank Board has accepted, another site for the National Theatre—immediately downstream of Waterloo Bridge, opposite Somerset House.
- Sept. The South Bank Board announces that work on the new site is due to start later in 1969 with a view to completion in 1973.
- 1969 Work on the Princess Meadow is inaugurated by Miss Jennie Lee, Lord Cottesloe, Lord Chandos and Mr. Desmond Plummer at an informal ceremony.

THE YOUNG VIC

THE Young Vic, the National Theatre's company for young people, began with a season in February, 1970 at the Jeannetta Cochrane Theatre. On 10 September, 1970 the Young Vic's own theatre, in The Cut, S.E.1, was opened as the company's permanent home.

THE ROYAL SHAKESPEARE COMPANY IN LONDON

IN December, 1960, the Aldwych theatre became the London home of the Royal Shakespeare Company and seasons of original productions and Stratford successes have been presented there each year. There have also been experimental seasons at the New Arts, March, 1962, the L.A.M.D.A. theatre club, January, 1964 and the Round House, October, 1970. Since March, 1964, the R.S.C. at the Aldwych have played host to the World Theatre Seasons under the artistic direction of Peter Daubeney (q.v.).

Cast lists and productions details of all these will be found in the appropriate London Playbills sections of Who's Who in the Theatre. Below is given a brief summary of productions by year:

THE THEATRE UPSTAIRS

THE Royal Court's second auditorium, The Theatre Upstairs, originated in the spring and summer of 1968, when a series of plays was presented in the Club Room above the Royal Court Theatre to see whether the space was effective as a studio theatre. These experimental productions included: "Remember Only the Roses"; "I'll See You Yesterday"; "Red Cross"; "Booze"; "The Topping of Thomas"; "The White Whore and the Bit Player"; "Moby Dick"; "Tub Boobs"; "An exhibition of Blushing and Stammering"; "Down Here and Up There"; "Bully Birchall's Mime Troupe"; "A Show of Violence"; "Squire Jonathan."

In February, 1969, following the success of the 1968 experiments, a fully-equipped studio theatre, The Theatre Upstairs, was opened. Productions since then have been as follows:

- 1969 "A Comedy of the Changing Years"; "The Paperbag Players"; "La Turista"; "Erogenous Zones"; "The Enoch Show"; "Raw"; "Blum at School" and "Poet of the Anemones" (double-bill); "Over Gardens Out"; "Revenge"; "Dear Janet Rosenberg, Dear Mr. Kooning"; "The People Show"; "The Sleepers Den"; "Pit"; "An Evening of Music Hall."
- 1970 "Christie in Love"; "A Who's Who of Flapland"; "Becket 3"; "Brain"; "Sport of My Mad Mother"; "AC/DC"; "Search for a Hero"; "Billy's Last Stand"; The Theatre Machine; "When Did You Last See My Mother"; "Inédits Ionesco"; "Cheek"; "Fruit" and "What Happened to Blake" (double-bill); Come Together Festival, "Auntie Maud is the Happening Thing"; "No-one Was Saved"; The Theatre Machine.

THE REPERTORY MOVEMENT IN GREAT BRITAIN

THE professional subsidised Repertory Theatres now play an increasingly important role in the everyday lives of people all over Great Britain. With increased subsidy from the Arts Council, local authorities and other sources, these theatres have grown in numbers and status over the past twelve years and present a very high standard of work.

In a foreword to a booklet on The Repertory Movement In Great Britain issued by the Council of Repertory Theatres (an organisation of non-profit distributing repertory companies) Sir Laurence Olivier, as Director of the National Theatre—himself a repertory theatre—says:

"The lively and healthy state in which the British theatre finds itself today is due almost entirely to the activity of the repertory movement over the last forty years.

Apart from the fact that for so many actors it has provided an opportunity to develop the imagination, stretch their talents and learn their craft—an opportunity such as few London theatres could ever risk giving them—thereby constantly enriching the national power-house of talent, the reps. have kept alive all over Britain the traditional love of drama, which has been our heritage.

I salute "The Reps.", the life-blood of the British theatre, and wish them a long and healthy life."

In an article entitled Rep.: The Other National Theatre, J. C. Trewin writes:

"Without the non-profit distributing repertory theatres the British theatre outside London would still exist, but it would be something unknown to much of the country.

The repertory movement has waxed, waned and waxed again and the reps. now plan for an exciting future. They know that outside the capital they hold the fate of the English stage—they maintain audiences, preserve major dramatists, help those untried and foster many leading players."

We who work in the repertory movement are deeply grateful to Mr. Trewin for these remarks, but if the repertory theatres are to plan for the future, maintain high standards of work, and keep up the exciting new theatres and arts centres which are being built and planned all over the country, ever increasing subsidy from the Government, local authorities and from industry is a vital necessity.

The history of the repertory movement is fascinating—it was founded in Great Britain in 1908 by Miss A. E. F. Horniman at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester. Her ideal had been to create in the provinces a centre of living drama which should not be dependent on London but would create its own dramatists and artists. During her tenure of the Gaiety Theatre (which she held until 1921) she presented many new plays, some of which are still in the repertory of theatres in the English-speaking world. Notable amongst these plays are "Hindle Wakes" by Stanley Houghton, "The Conquering Hero" by Alan Monkhouse and "Hobson's Choice" by Harold Brighouse. The last-named play, forty-seven years after its first production, found its way into the repertory of the first season of the National Theatre, 1963-4.

During Miss Horniman's lifetime, two other repertory theatres were born, both of which still flourish. The Liverpool Playhouse was founded in 1911 and in 1913, the late Sir Barry Jackson founded the Birmingham Repertory Theatre—these two veteran companies aimed at a standard in presenting a play for more than a week at a time.

THE REPERTORY MOVEMENT IN GREAT BRITAIN

On the outbreak of war in 1939 there were twenty repertory companies settled in the United Kingdom. The majority of these, in addition to changing their programme weekly, often played twice-nightly and the struggle for survival was hard. World War II, which cut the existing link between London and the provincial theatre, gave the repertory companies an impetus with a corresponding rise in standard. The twice-nightly programme was gradually eliminated, and with the post-war revival of interest in the arts and gradual acceptance of the idea that the State (through the Arts Council of Great Britain) should be patron and benefactor, the repertory theatres began to take the place of the touring theatres in public esteem.

In 1952 there were over 100 repertory theatres in Great Britain and the majority were weekly reps. Artists and staff worked long hours for a mere pittance because they loved the theatre. Costs had to be cut to the bone, so that few repertory theatres could risk presenting new and controversial plays and there were few amenities to attract new and young provincial audiences to the theatres. Gradually the repertory theatres realised the importance of food and drink in a theatre, and the need to make a theatre an attractive social centre where audiences could enjoy a complete evening out.

In 1955, with the advent of commercial television, the provincial theatre once again waned and the reps. touched an all-time low. Vast numbers of artists fled from the provinces to London and many commercial and touring theatres closed. There began yet another battle for survival, but the theatres receiving subsidy from the Arts Council gradually improved their choice of play, as well as production standards, and did much to brighten up the buildings in which they worked. With the gradual increase in subsidy, many repertory theatres went from weekly to fortnightly and even to three-weekly productions, which meant that more time could be given to rehearsals.

In 1958 the Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, was opened by H.R.H. the Duchess of Kent. It was the first new civic theatre and was a symbol of the changing pattern of British theatrical life—it gave the provincial theatre new heart. A number of exciting new repertory theatres were built in the following years—in 1963 the superb Nottingham Playhouse was opened by Lord Snowdon in an atmosphere of splendour and sparks, and it is significant to note that in that year the drama allocation from the Arts Council was seven times the allocation in 1952.

The repertory theatres were now able to present new and controversial plays—Osborne, Pinter, Beckett, Wesker, Ionesco could be found mingling with Coward and Christie. In addition to the lovely new theatres being built old theatres were refurbished—the Theatre Royal, York and the Playhouse, Liverpool have been given an exciting new look. In all this building activity in the provinces the Arts Council's Housing the Arts Fund has played a vital part. Among the new theatres built in recent years are—the delightful little Phoenix Theatre at Leicester, the Ashcroft, Croydon; the Northcott Theatre, Exeter; the Yvonne Arnaud Theatre, Guildford; the warm and charming Thorndike Theatre, Leatherhead; the Swan Theatre, Worcester; the Gateway, Chester; the Playhouse, Leeds, to name a few. The building of the Mercury Theatre, Colchester is well under way and in Bromley, Birmingham, Derby, Farnham, Ipswich, Lincoln, Salisbury and Sheffield, new theatres are being built or are in the pipeline.

It is all breathtaking, but a steady stream of talented artists and staff is essential to give life to these fine new buildings. Money and more money is needed—artists must be paid a living wage and technical staff trained. With the backing of the Arts Council a number of training schemes for directors, administrators and technicians are being undertaken by the repertory theatres. However, the most important ingredient needed to maintain a strong and vital repertory movement is a new young audience and with this in mind the majority of the subsidised repertory theatres are doing important work for young people, both in their theatres and in schools, and there are a number of professional specialist Children's Theatre Companies. Strong adult and young people's supporters' clubs are attached to most reps. and these have formed themselves into an active association—The Federation of Playgoers' Societies. Every section of the community is encouraged to make theatre-going a habit, and, with the help of the Arts Council Transport Subsidy, a large coach party trade has been built up, and Old Age Pensioners, students and others are given concessions.

To quote Sir Laurence again—

“I salute ‘The Reps.’ the life-blood of the British theatre.”

We in the repertory movement salute Miss Horniman and hope she approves of us.

FOUNDED in 1934 for the purpose of promoting a wider knowledge of the United Kingdom and the English language abroad, and developing closer cultural relations with other countries, the British Council established its Drama Department in 1937. In this field, the Council's main activities are (a) the sponsoring of overseas tours by leading British Companies, (b) the distribution of copies of British plays with a view to their performance overseas by local professional and amateur companies, (c) the giving of advice and information on theatrical matters, (d) the sponsoring of visits to Britain by eminent personalities of the theatre for professional studies, and contacts with representatives of the British Theatre. Among the United Kingdom scholarships awarded by the Council to graduates and others of similar status from overseas there are a number reserved for studies relating to drama and the theatre.

The Drama and Music Departments of the British Council were amalgamated in April, 1961.

The Arts Council's work develops so rapidly that figures and details become out of date from one year to the next. This article, therefore, refers to general aims and policies. For up-to-date facts and figures the reader should consult the Arts Council's Annual Reports, the Quarterly Bulletins and the Council's various special publications, which may be purchased from the Publications Departments of the Arts Council. ### INTRODUCTION

The Arts Council was established under Royal Charter in August, 1946, to continue the work begun during the war by C.E.M.A. (Council for the Encouragement of Music and the Arts). A new Royal Charter was granted by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II on 7th February, 1967. The Council's objects, as defined by its Charter, are to develop and improve the knowledge, understanding and practice of the arts, to increase the accessibility of the arts to the public throughout Great Britain; and to advise and cooperate with Government Departments, local authorities and other bodies on any matters concerned whether directly or indirectly with the foregoing objects.

The Council consists of a Chairman and not more than nineteen other members who are appointed for periods up to five years by the Minister responsible, after consultation with the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales. Separate committees exist for Scotland and Wales known as the Scottish Arts Council and the Welsh Arts Council. The Arts Council of Great Britain receives its grant-in-aid from the Government through the Department of Education and Science. It is an autonomous body and within its overall annual grant it makes its own allocations to the Scottish and Welsh Councils respectively and to each of its own Departments covering the various fields of activity which it supports. These are principally Drama, Music, Art and Literature, each being advised on its work by Panels of experts; the Panels in turn appoint their own sub-committees to consider particular problems or specialised subjects. Council, Panel and sub-committee members alike are appointed as individuals, not as representatives of organisations, and they receive no payment for their services. The Council's work is confined to Great Britain and its grant cannot be used elsewhere. Since its resources are insufficient to cover every aspect of artistic activity, the Council's policy is to confine its support to professional institutions or individuals engaged in promoting the arts, rather than to amateur activities. For an organisation to be approved for a subsidy it must be a properly constituted non-profit-distributing body registered as a charity.

This article concerns itself with the Council's drama activities only.

SUBSIDISED DRAMA

Since the foundation of the Arts Council, the pattern of Theatre in Great Britain has changed very greatly: this may be largely due to other influences—for example, the growth of television—but it is clearly true that fundamental developments have been fostered and in many cases only made possible by Arts Council subsidy. The number and quality of repertory theatres have grown steadily; from perhaps a dozen permanent companies before the war there are now around seventy. Twenty years ago there were a handful of companies that did fortnightly or longer repertory; the rest were either weekly or even twice nightly companies; all this has changed and now the Arts Council supports no weekly repertory theatres. The Council has encouraged companies to change from weekly to fortnightly, then to three-weekly repertory and some are playing true repertory. Furthermore, at one time these theatres were "playhouses" open to the public during evening and matinee performances only, but now most of them provide a wide range of other activities—lunch-time or late night shows, jazz, poetry, theatre for young people, and so on. In London too there has been an increase in the number of subsidised companies; at first the Old Vic alone, but now it is difficult to imagine the London scene without the English Stage Company, the Royal Shakespeare, the National and the Mermaid. At the same time provincial touring has declined and a great number of touring and variety theatres have been lost altogether: the Arts Council is now trying to provide more "product" for the touring theatres.

The subsidy for drama has steadily increased. In 1950/51 the Arts Council's total grant-in-aid was (in round figures) £675,000, of which the expenditure on drama was £95,000 for just over a dozen companies: in 1960/61 the total grant-in-aid was £1,500,000 of which £184,000 was spent on drama, with just over thirty companies: in 1970/71 the total grant was £9,300,000—Drama's share being £2,373,000 for about seventy companies. A part of the drama expenditure, of course, is spent on the various training and other schemes referred to later. Thus, in the last twenty years the Arts Council's grant has increased slightly less than fifteen fold, whereas the amount spent on drama has multiplied about twenty-five times.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S THEATRE

In 1966 the Arts Council completed an Enquiry into Young People's Theatre; the following year, for the first time, the Drama allocation was increased to provide subsidy for this work, and a Panel was appointed to advise the Arts Council in this new field. In January 1971 the Drama and Young People's Theatre Panels were amalgamated, and the new Drama Panel has a sub-committee to deal with this side of its work in detail. Subsidy is given to a number of companies which specialise in performing for children and young people, and smaller sums are given to certain repertory theatres which do work for young people in addition to their main function of playing for the general public.

THE ARTS COUNCIL OF GREAT BRITAIN

EXPERIMENTAL GROUPS

A proportion (whether too little or too much depends very much upon one's point of view and age) of the drama allocation is earmarked for fringe or experimental drama groups. The subsidies, although small, are given on a less formal basis than for the "established" companies, and without any implication that they will necessarily be continued from one year to another.

SPECIAL SCHEMES

During the past twenty years the Arts Council has developed a series of schemes for the encouragement of new talent in the theatre. This began with the New Drama Scheme, to which have been added schemes for Designers, Administrators, Directors and Technicians. These can best be described as post-graduate schemes (this is an over-simplification) and all of them are operated on a highly selective basis. The total amount spent upon them is relatively small in relation to the overall Drama budget but their value to the professional theatre is very great indeed, for it is vital to encourage a steady flow of new talent into the theatre, especially when television can offer more money for the same work.

The following particulars refer to England. The Scottish and Welsh Arts Councils operate schemes similar to some of these, although differing in detail to cater for their own special problems.

New Drama

New plays by unknown writers are always something of a risk, and at one time repertory theatres could not afford, and did not take, many such risks. The New Drama Scheme was initiated by the Arts Council in 1952 with the primary purpose of encouraging repertory theatres to mount good new plays by providing limited guarantees against loss for those plays considered by the Drama Panel to be of sufficient merit: a further guarantee ensured a minimum royalty to the playwright. More than 400 new plays have been guaranteed so far. The scheme has been widened over the years to include guarantees for the second production of some plays and for revivals of neglected plays. In addition, the Council provides help for individual playwrights by offering a limited number of bursaries and by making it financially possible for theatres to commission plays or appoint a resident dramatist. Over 80 dramatists have been helped under these schemes. In 1965, the John Whiting Award was established and is awarded annually for the writer whose work during the year showed a new and distinctive development in dramatic writing.

Theatre Administration Training Scheme

The Arts Council has operated this scheme since 1963 in close cooperation with the Council of Repertory Theatres: grants are given to selected individuals to enable them to be seconded for varying periods of time to repertory theatres with different policies, so that they can gain a wide range of practical knowledge. The training periods vary from 3-12 months, depending upon the individual's past experience. More recently a full time Arts Administration Course, with a broader curriculum, has been run by the Arts Council in conjunction with the Polytechnic School of Management Studies. The whole question of training of Arts Administrators is the subject of an Enquiry set up by the Arts Council, which is due to report by the end of 1971.

Designers' Scheme

This scheme, which began in 1961, offers selected managements a contribution towards the cost of appointing a young designer for approximately a year as an additional member of the theatre staff. Candidates are chosen following the completion of an exercise set annually by the Drama Panel, and, once appointed, the designers work not as students but as members of the theatre's design department staff and are given both training and practical experience in a working theatre. On completion of the appointment the award may in some cases be extended for a short period to enable the designers to widen their experience by visiting other theatres in Great Britain. A second part of the scheme allows for some of these designers, after they have been out on their own for a year or so on the completion of their initial appointment, to be given a second, and shorter, period at a higher level of responsibility in a different theatre.

WHO'S WHO IN THE THEATRE

Trainee Directors' Scheme

At present this relatively new scheme is divided into two parts, the first for Young Directors to enable them to study all aspects of directing plays while attached to a company or theatre; and the second for Directors with more experience to enable them to extend their knowledge and experience in specific areas of work for periods of up to about six months.

Theatre Technicians' Training Scheme

When the Trainee Technicians' Course was originated a few years ago it was organised by the Arts Council with a Joint Committee of C.O.R.T. and N.A.T.K.E. and provided young men with the opportunity to undertake apprenticeship training in provincial repertory theatres. Recently, the Association of British Theatre Technicians, with the cooperation of the Society of West End Theatre Managers and N.A.T.K.E., has organised Day Release Training Schemes for technicians already employed in West End Theatres, and the A.B.T.T. has been given a grant by the Arts Council to appoint a Technical and Training Officer to administer these schemes, which at present are for carpenters and electricians. The possibility of extending training in the provinces is under consideration.

DRAMA SCHOOLS

In 1969 the Arts Council agreed to provide very limited subsidy on a purely emergency basis to certain Drama Schools, if a crisis developed which threatened their existence or standards. This was done because there was no other body to which the schools could turn for subsidy, but the Arts Council has not accepted Drama Schools as its permanent responsibility. At present, the Council has no schemes for providing help, or post-graduate training, for individual actors.

HOUSING THE ARTS

One of the most important developments for the Theatre in Great Britain was the Government's decision in 1965/66 to allocate a specific sum to the Arts Council to encourage building projects. Of the strictly limited sums provided, the bulk of the money has been spent on theatre schemes, and there cannot be many new or refurbished theatres in the provinces which have not benefited from the Arts Council's Housing the Arts funds. Contributions may not exceed 50% of the total cost, but in practice the average amount contributed to new theatre buildings has been nearer 20%, the balance being raised locally—usually from the local authority and by public appeal. Priority is given to the housing of fully professional permanent companies, and as the demand far exceeds the limited amount available, there is invariably a long waiting list of applications.

THEATRE ENQUIRY—"THE THEATRE TODAY"

This is a major document of Arts Council drama policy. In the autumn of 1969 the Council initiated a wide-ranging Enquiry "to investigate the theatre, both subsidised and non-subsidised, with particular reference to the extent and use of subsidy from all sources and to recommend how the position should be improved." Eventually the Enquiry was restricted to England and Wales as the Scottish Arts Council elected to make a separate enquiry into the theatre in Scotland. The Theatre Enquiry's Report was published in March 1970 and accepted by the Arts Council. Amongst other recommendations, it suggested the establishment of a Theatre Investment Fund "to encourage and assist reputable managements to increase the production of new plays of interest, and revivals of quality, and to cause such productions to tour as widely as possible in the provinces." This would be of particular benefit to the non-subsidised section of the theatre. At the time of preparing this note the Theatre Investment Fund has not yet been established, but it is hoped that a sufficient allocation may eventually be provided in the Arts Council's estimates. The Report also dealt in some detail with touring, making important proposals about the preservation of a number of theatres and for the organisation of touring on a concerted basis. The Council has already allocated additional money for touring and is coordinating touring by the major, as well as small scale, companies. The Report also dealt with the subsidised theatres in London and the repertory theatres in the provinces, together with chapters on theatre boards, monopoly in the theatre, and the Theatres' Act of 1968 which deals with obscene performances of plays. Most of the recommendations in the Report have already been acted upon.

THE ARTS COUNCIL OF GREAT BRITAIN

COMPUTER BOOKING WORKING PARTY

In 1969, in response to a request from the Society of West End Theatre Managers and the Dramatic and Lyric Theatres' Association, the Arts Council set up a Working Party on which the entertainment industry as a whole was represented to consider the effect of booking seats by computer. In conjunction with the National Computing Centre and with funds partly contributed by members of the Working Party, a report was commissioned on the feasibility of computer booking and seat marketing and a number of trial runs were formulated with two of the computerised systems. However, one of the systems has now bought Keith Prowse Ltd. and the other has ceased trading. The Working Party is, therefore, trying to draw up a contract of agreement that could be used within the industry and a "users' association."

SEAT PRICES

A further Enquiry of particular interest to the Theatre is at present in progress, for it is considering the whole question of seat prices at public entertainments: its investigations should be concluded by the end of 1971.

OTHER ENQUIRIES

In addition to the Enquiries mentioned which have particularly concerned the Theatre, the Arts Council has initiated a number of other important Enquiries which have affected its overall work. For example, the Opera and Ballet Enquiry, the Working Party on the Obscenity Laws, the Orchestral Resources Enquiry and New Activities Committee, and the Working Party on the Public Lending Right. Most of these reports have been published and copies, together with "The Theatre Today" and "The Theatre in Scotland", can be obtained from the Arts Council's offices, together with detailed conditions of the New Drama and Training Schemes which have been referred to.

CONCLUSION

The Arts Council supplies money, but this in itself does not automatically produce a flourishing artistic life: the real achievement is that of the artists themselves and of the companies and theatres they work in. It is also important to recognise how much is done for the theatre in this country by individuals who voluntarily give up so much of their time to the affairs of the Arts Council and on theatre boards. Many theatres have received financial support from industry and private patrons and recognition must also be given to the growing part played by municipalities in the capital and revenue support of their local theatres. However, at present, and speaking generally, the Arts Council provides the major proportion of theatres' subsidy.

CENTRES FOR THEATRE RESEARCH

By GEORGE NASH

Officer in charge of the Theatre Collections, Victoria and Albert Museum

THE location and function of theatrical collections in the British Isles is not the result of a planned development. Most of the important depositories of original material are certainly centralized in London but, unfortunately, housed in different buildings and administered by numerous institutions. In consequence, there is a degree of overlapping in scope and some lack of integration. In the main, however, all the official bodies co-operate in helping with any task which involves research. Inquiries which they may individually be unable to answer will either be passed on to the appropriate body or the inquirers will be advised as to whom their queries should be addressed. This also applies to most of the private libraries and collections, the owners and administrators of which are often prepared to go to great lengths in order to assist the serious student.

According to their accessibility to the public and also to the responsibility for their organization and maintenance, the collections can be divided into four main groups. These are (a) collections owned by national museums and institutions; (b) those located in provincial galleries and libraries administered from local government offices; (c) material found in special libraries maintained by semi-public institutions; (d) collections owned and housed by private individuals or associations.

COLLECTIONS IN NATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

The British Museum, Bloomsbury, London, W.C.1.

Opening hours: Main Reading Room, Mon., Fri., Sat., 9 a.m. till 5 p.m., Tues, Wed., Thurs., 9 a.m. till 9 p.m.

Print Room, 10 a.m. till 4 p.m. Mon. till Fri., 10 a.m. till 12.30 p.m. on Sat.

Facilities: photographs, microfilm, photostats available; books, pamphlets, and postcard reproductions on sale.

Sir Hans Sloane (1660–1753) bequeathed his library and collection to the nation. The Sloane Library was brought together with other collections already under public ownership and housed in Montague House, a building specially acquired for this purpose in the year of Sir Hans Sloane's death. The Royal Library was given to the nation by King George II, and this also joined the other collections at Montague House; the building was opened to the public in 1759. In addition to the many famous and comprehensive collections which the British Museum has subsequently acquired, the Copyright privilege brought to it by the Royal Library has enabled a unique collection of manuscripts and books to be established. However, for the theatre historian, the usefulness of the resources is limited by the dispersal of the theatre records throughout several departments.

In the Printed Books Department an enormous collection of plays is to be found, printed in all languages. The Lord Chamberlain's Office has passed on to the Museum all the plays submitted to that office for licensing between 1821 and 1903. For the time being the Lord Chamberlain will retain those texts submitted from 1903 until the Abolition of Censorship Bill was passed in 1968. This legislation now requires managements to deposit a copy of the texts of all productions with the British Museum Library. (Many of the early plays have found their way to America and are now in the Larpent Collection which is part of the Huntington Library, California.) The Burney Collection of early newspapers (1603–1800) is housed in the Department; papers for the years from 1800 are now in the Newspaper Library at Colindale. Also in the Printed Books Department is to be found the Burney Collection of theatre playbills (1768–1817) and the Harris Collection of London theatre notices (1704-79). This department also houses collections of provincial playbills and newspaper criticisms as well as those for London theatres.

The Department of Manuscripts contains original documents of great rarity; these include correspondence from eminent playwrights, actors and actresses, manuscripts of early Latin, Spanish and Italian dramas, papers, accounts and legal records relating to the Chester and York cycles of miracle plays, a Shakespeare signature, plays by Beaumont and Fletcher and other dramatists of the sixteenth century and the Restoration period as well as the Richard Brinsley Sheridan Collection. There are also many prompt books and account books as well as leases and agreements.

The Department of Prints and Drawings includes works by artists and designers of all countries and periods. There is also a very extensive collection of engraved dramatic portraits, scenes from plays, and designs for costumes. The department also has the Ralph Thomas Collection of Juvenile Drama.

The London Museum, Kensington Palace, London, W.8.

Opening hours: March till September 10 a.m. till 6 p.m. Mon. till Sat. October to February, 10 a.m. till 4 p.m.

The galleries of the museum are also open on Sundays from 2 p.m. till 4 p.m.

Facilities: Pamphlets and postcard reproductions of exhibits are on sale. Private photography is allowed in certain circumstances.

The London Museum was founded in 1910. Viscount Leverhulme presented Lancaster House to the nation and the collections formed by Viscount Esher and Viscount Harcourt were brought together and housed in this beautiful building. Unfortunately the war caused its contents to be stored away for safe keeping, and the house was finally closed in 1943. When peace was restored it was decided that Lancaster House should be used for diplomatic activities and the London Museum was transferred to Kensington Palace, Kensington Gardens, where it opened to the public in 1951. This is not considered to be its permanent home, and a new building may be provided in the near future.

The museum is concerned with the life and history of London. Here are to be found many items of nostalgic theatrical interest. Costumes of famous actors, actresses, clowns, opera singers and dancers, their stage jewellery and properties. There are collections of playbills and programmes, also photographs. The special collections include the stage costumes worn by Sir Henry Irving, the Martin Harvey Collection of designs, prompt books, and other records of his productions and the Jonathan King Collection of Juvenile Drama. The latter includes almost all the engraved plates issued by Juvenile Drama publishers during the period 1813-60.

The Public Record Office, Chancery Lane, London, W.C.2.

Opening hours: Search Rooms, 9.30 a.m. till 5 p.m. Saturdays 9.30 a.m. till 1 p.m.

Facilities: Photographs, microfilm, and photostats are available.

Publications: A large number of the papers and official rolls have been published and are listed in Sectional List No. 24 by H.M. Stationery Office.

Established by an Act of Parliament, which was passed in 1838, all the official and semi-official records no longer required by the appropriate government department are preserved by this authority. Among these national archives, which include ancient as well as modern documents, a considerable amount of theatrical history has been and remains to be found. The Patent Rolls reveal many facts about the lives of early actors and others and the State Papers contain many references to the early theatres and the lives of actors during the Restoration period and earlier. The domestic State Papers also contain many assorted documents and among these has recently been discovered a playbill for the year 1672. This is probably the earliest known playbill for a theatrical performance in England, if one excepts the rather special broadsheet which was issued for an announced performance of "England's Joy" at the Swan Theatre in 1602.

The Revels Accounts for the years of 1604-5 and 1611-12 which are preserved among the Audit Office papers are, of course, of great importance. These were at one time suspected of being forgeries, but recent microscopic examination has proved their authenticity. They contain details, dates, and payments for the performance of many plays, some of which are said to have been performed by "Shaxberd." The section of the Lord Chamberlain's Office records which relate to the licensing of theatre buildings, the plans and inspection certificates, etc., are also deposited in these vaults. The Home Office Accounts, containing legal papers relating to theatrical disputes, the accounts of the Master of Ceremonies, The Master of the Wardrobe, and the records of the Treasury also prove to be store-houses of original material for the student of British theatrical history.

The Victoria and Albert Museum, Cromwell Road, South Kensington, London, S.W.7.

Opening hours: Library, 10 a.m. till 5.45 p.m. Mon. to Sat.

Department of Prints and Drawings, and Paintings, 10 a.m. till 4.50 p.m.

Facilities: Photographs, microfilm, and photostats are available; Books, pamphlets, and postcard reproductions are on sale.

The present Museum descends from the Museum of Ornamental Art, which opened in 1852 in Marlborough House, where it first consisted of a number of objects bought from the Great Exhibition of 1851, together with other objects loaned from the Royal Family and private collectors. From this nucleus, the Museum grew rapidly, and was transferred in 1857 to South Kensington, where it became part of the great collective South Kensington Museum. The art collections then flourished greatly, and in 1909 they were finally separated under the title of the Victoria and Albert Museum.

Since its early days, the Library has steadily acquired works published on every aspect of art in the theatre, both in Britain and abroad. The joint Department of Prints and Drawings (formerly the Department of Engraving, Illustration, and Design) and of Paintings contains many hundreds of original designs for theatrical scenes and costumes and forms, perhaps, one of the most outstanding theatre collections in the world.

This department has made a great contribution to the study of theatre art and history. Almost all of its theatrical records are contained in one large gallery where small exhibitions are held and which also houses the Gabrielle Enthoven Theatre Collection. This latter was given to the Museum by its founder in 1924. It contains over 1,000,000 playbills and programmes and over 6,000 engravings as well as a wealth of newspaper cuttings, prompt books and autographed letters, photographs and souvenirs. These are arranged chronologically under the name of the theatre to which they refer, thus building up a history of the London Stage from the beginning of the eighteenth century. Since 1925, with the co-operation of the London theatre managers, the first-night programmes and newspaper criticisms of every new production have been added to the files. The collection also acquires photographs of the performances and also of the theatres themselves. Files are kept of each building which record its development; these contain engravings, photographs, and plans. Also in the Enthoven Collection is to be found the Peter Davey manuscript. In this unpublished work, entitled "The Chronicles of the Theatres of Southern England," Davey lists the managements and some performances at theatres situated in that part of England which lies south of a line extending from London to Bristol. Another special collection is the Guy Tristram Little Photographic Collection which contains seventeen volumes of photographs of stage personalities dating from 1857 to 1890. In 1951 the Museum was also given the M.W. Stone Collection of Juvenile Drama which may be said to rank in importance with any of those already housed in London.

In 1969 all the material belonging to the London Archives of the Dance was transferred to this Museum as a gift from Mr. C. W. Beaumont and his fellow trustees. In the same year the ballet records were further enriched by the magnificent gift of approximately a hundred and forty lithographic and other engraved portraits which were donated by Dame Marie Rambert in the names of herself and her late husband, Mr. Ashley Dukes. The Museum has also greatly strengthened its Toy Theatre records by purchasing the Herbert Hinkins Collection during 1971. This Collection is particularly rich in Juvenile Drama, published by Continental publishers. However, the most outstanding acquisition has been the gift of the entire Harry R. Beard Collection in 1971. Following the tragically sudden death of that distinguished historian of the theatre, opera and ballet, his executors decided on the Victoria and Albert Museum as the most suitable home for this important Collection.

Finally, the Victoria and Albert Museum Library contains two valuable special libraries—

The Alexander Dyce Collection, bequeathed to the museum in 1869. This contains a rich collection of early printed plays, about thirty manuscripts of sixteenth century interludes and plays (including a seventeenth century version of Beaumont and Fletcher's "The Honest Man's Fortune") and early editions of plays by most British dramatists.

The John Forster Collection bequeathed in 1876 also houses a large number of early printed plays and thirty-nine volumes of David Garrick's correspondence.

GALLERIES AND LIBRARIES ADMINISTERED BY LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

Since the last edition of WHO'S WHO IN THE THEATRE was published, the boroughs of the Greater London Council have been regrouped and their boundaries adjusted. The administrators of most of the Public Libraries of the new boroughs have taken the opportunity to centralise their holdings of local theatrical collections. In some instances these have been moved to other buildings where they have been established as part of general Local History Collections relating to the whole of the larger new boroughs. Some boroughs in London and elsewhere have selected sections of theatrical history in which to specialise. The increased interest being taken in their development and efficiency has resulted in the growing importance of theatrical collections in galleries and libraries administered by local governments throughout the country. The larger collections in this group are to be found at:—

Battersea District Library, Lavender Hill, S.W.11 (Now part of the London Borough of Wandsworth).

Local collection; special interest in all aspects of theatre architecture.

Bermondsey (Now part of the London Borough of Southwark)—see Southwark.

Bethnal Green (Now part of the London Borough of Tower Hamlets).

Camberwell (Now part of the London Borough of Southwark)—see Southwark.

The public libraries in provincial towns house numerous important theatre collections. The larger of these are—

Birmingham Public Libraries, Reference Department, Ratcliff Place. One of the most important Shakespearean Collections in the world, the Shakespeare Memorial Library was founded in 1864. In addition to a set of five first folios, nine quartos, and a complete set of Restoration Quartos, there are approximately thirty-five thousand books and pamphlets, six hundred volumes of Shakespearean music, and three hundred periodicals. The collection also contains about forty thousand playbills and programmes of performances of Shakespeare throughout the world and other theatrical productions in Birmingham. The library includes translations of Shakespeare into sixty different languages and also has the Forrest Collection of Shakespeare illustrations contained in seventy-six volumes.

The Birmingham Repertory Theatre was given to the city in 1935 by Sir Barry Jackson and also contains the records of its productions.

Bournemouth, Russell-Cotes Art Gallery and Museum, East Cliff. This contains two stage costumes for "Hamlet" and "Charles I," various properties and stage jewellery, swords and daggers, a number of portraits of Irving by J. L. Barnard, together with some relics and costumes belonging to Irving's sons and contemporaries. Sir Henry Irving Collection. Opened in 1922, the museum was formerly the residence of Sir Meeton Russell-Cotes, who presented his collections to the town.

Facilities: Photographs available. Publication: "Souvenir of the Irving Collection," published 1927, price 1s.

Manchester Central Library, St. Peter's Square, Manchester, 2.

The League was founded in 1919 by Mr. Geoffrey Whitworth, C.B.E. It is an organization formed to assist the development of the art of the theatre. Its library is entirely a theatrical one and contains over 150,000 volumes. It includes the set of prompt copies of all the plays used by Miss A. E. Horniman during her tenancy of the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester (1908-21), and the theatrical library formed by the critic and dramatist William Archer (1856-1924), comprising 1,500 plays from most northern European countries. The latter collection also comprises theatrical articles contributed to periodicals and newspapers. There is also a large collection of plays presented by Harley Granville Barker (1877-1946), a collection of books and prompt copies which belonged to Sir Nigel Playfair (1874-1934), and also scrapbooks and puppet masks collected by Edward Gordon Craig.

British Broadcasting Corporation, Broadcasting House, Portland Place, London W.1.

Founded for the use of the staff of the Corporation, the library may be used by special permission of the Director-General of the B.B.C. It includes radio and television scripts, books, and texts of plays. Dates of broadcast and televised performances and other records are kept, and an index of plays and articles, etc. There is also a music library and the Radio Times Hulton Picture Library, which contains many interesting theatrical photographs. The latter is run on commercial lines, and prints can be obtained for publication on payment of a fee.

British Theatre Museum, The, Leighton House, Holland Park Road, London, W.14.

Hours: Tues., Thurs., and Sats., 11 a.m. till 5 p.m.

The Association was founded in October, 1956, to campaign for the establishment of a National Theatre Museum. Temporary premises for the museum and exhibitions in the gallery at Leighton House were opened in June, 1963. The trustees are prepared to accept gifts or bequests on behalf of the museum. Collections already held in trust include—jewellery, and a very large number of letters written to Henry Irving by his distinguished contemporaries. The Pauline Chase Collection, including 71 letters from J. M. Barrie (1906-37). H. Granville Barker Collection of original manuscripts. Ernest Short Collection (1882-1956). Debenham Collection of photographs (1931-38). Manuscripts of sixty-seven plays by Tom Taylor (1844-79), and associated correspondence. Irene Mawer Memorial Library.

The Library of Dulwich College, Dulwich, London, S.E.21.

Open during school terms only. Special permission is required for inspection by appointment.

This library contains over 11,000 books, the correspondence, diary, account book and papers which belonged to the founder of the College, Edward Alleyn (1566-1626), the Elizabethan actor. It also has the account book of Alleyn's father-in-law, Philip Henslowe (?-1616), theatrical manager and financier. The latter volume gives detailed information about Elizabethan theatrical performances over a period of six years, and also has inventories of stage properties and musical instruments. The library also houses the stage-plot for the "Second Parte of the Seven Deadlie Sinns," and Alleyn's part as "Orlando" in Greene's "Orlando Furioso," as well as the contracts for building the Fortune and the Hope Theatres.

Publications: "Catalogue of the manuscripts and the muniments of Alleyn's College of God's Gift at Dulwich," edited by G. F. Warner, published 1881.

"Henslowe's Diary," edited by W. W. Greg, published 1904.

"Henslowe's Papers," published 1907, also edited by W. W. Greg.

National Buildings Record, Fielden House, Great College Street, London, S.W.1.

Open to the public without charge.

Hours: 9.30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m. Sat. 9.30 a.m. till 12.30 p.m.

Founded in 1941 as an independent body. Approximately 400,000 photographs and five thousand lantern slides. It aims to make a survey by photographs and measured drawings of the historic architecture of the British Isles. The collection already includes records of many British theatres. Photographs and microfilms can be obtained; lantern slides are lent to institutions.

National Operatic and Dramatic Association, 1 Crestfield Street, London, W.C.1.

The Association was founded in 1899 and the library in 1907. It includes 50,000 books and volumes of music scores and libretti, principally dealing with light opera; it also has a large number of "sets" of plays.

Facilities: Single volumes may be borrowed or sets of libretti and scores, etc., for an entire production on payment of the annual subscription and hire fee. A year-book and three bulletins per year are issued to members.

Religious Drama Society ("Radius"), Bell House, Snow Hill, London, E.C.1.

Hours: Mon. till Fri. 10 a.m. till 5 p.m.

Facilities: Single copies of works may be borrowed, or sets may be hired on payment of the annual subscription (£2 2s. 0d.), and hire fee. The Society was formed in 1929 "to foster the art of drama as a means of religious expression . . . and to interpret the Christian way of life."

Extensive library of books on drama, plays, and "sets" of plays.

Various catalogues published, and an occasional newsletter.

Annual Summer School.

Society for Theatre Research, 103 Ralph Court, Queensway, London, W.2.

Library open to members on payment of annual subscription.

Queries dealt with by post.

The Society was founded in 1948 "to bring together those interested in the history of the British Theatre and to encourage further research." The library contains a thousand books and pamphlets, 120 play-texts, and several hundreds of programmes, prints, and photographs. There are monthly lectures during winter; a quarterly bulletin in "Theatre Notebook," which is issued free to members; and an annual publication and pamphlets issued free to members.

CENTRES FOR THEATRE RESEARCH

University of Bristol (see also Richard Southern Theatre Collection)

The theatre collection of this university was founded in 1946 to serve undergraduates studying drama as part of their degree curriculum and post-graduates working on dramatic literature or theatre history. It contains a large collection of playbills for both London and provincial theatres, particularly Bristol and Bath, dating from the eighteenth century to the present day. Paintings, prompt-books, and texts of plays, together with a complete folio of the works of Adolphe Appia, have also been collected.

University of Cambridge

CLARE COLLEGE LIBRARY

Open on application.

A collection of sixteenth and seventeenth century dramatic works.

TRINITY COLLEGE LIBRARY

Open weekdays 2 p.m. till 4 p.m.

There is a rich collection of Shakespeariana among the Capell Papers. A catalogue of the Capell Collection, edited by W. W. Greg, was published in 1903.

University of Oxford

BODLEIAN LIBRARY

Open: Weekdays 9 a.m. till 7 p.m. Camera Reading Room, 10 a.m. till 10 p.m.

Photographs can be made when special permission has been obtained.

Founded in 1610, this library contains much that is of interest to students of the theatre. As with the British Museum, it benefits from being defined as one of the Deposit Libraries in the British Copyright Laws. The collection of Shakespeariana ranks with the best in Britain. There is also: the Edward Malone Collection of printed books and editions of plays (1500-1800); the Francis Douce Collection of printed books and portfolios of scenes from plays, bequeathed in 1834; the Robert Ross Collection of Oscar Wilde's works and papers; also manuscripts of John Galsworthy and T. S. Eliot.

WORCESTER COLLEGE LIBRARY

Open on application.

The library has a collection of plays and masques printed before 1750.

A description of the collection written by C. H. Wilkinson was published in "Theatre Notebook," Volume 8, Number 1, October, 1953, page 15.

Vic-Wells Association Library, Old Vic Theatre, and Sadler's Wells Theatre.

The library was formed in 1948 and covers the subjects of drama, opera, and ballet. A large file of playbills and programmes for performances at the Old Vic Theatre and the Sadler's Wells Theatre is kept in chronological order. (The Coburg and The Victoria were early names of the Old Vic.) There are also numerous published biographies of actors and actresses and books on general theatrical subjects. The library is open when the theatres are open, Tues., Thurs., and Sat., 6.30-8.30 p.m.

PRIVATE COLLECTIONS

Chatsworth. The Library, Chatsworth, Edensor, near Bakewell, Derbyshire.

The collections of the Duke of Devonshire are now administered by the Trustees of the Chatsworth Settlement.

Special permission is required for inspection by appointment. (Chatsworth House is open to visitors during April to October.)

Designs by Inigo Jones (1573-1652) for masques and plays at Court are in the collection of His Grace the Duke of Devonshire. There are also drawings for "The Siege of Rhodes," by John Webb. A catalogue of the Designs by Inigo Jones by Percy Simpson and C. F. Bell was published as Volume XII of the Walpole Society in 1924.

WHO'S WHO IN THE THEATRE

The Covent Garden Archives, The Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, London, W.C.2. Open to the public by written appointment only.

In 1951 it was decided to establish a collection of archives of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden. After a public appeal, a good deal of material was donated and purchased. Although the emphasis is upon the operatic history, the collection contains an appreciable amount on the early history of the two theatre buildings which stood on the site of the present Opera House. There are opera bills, prospectuses, and libretti for the first years of opera; almost complete records for 1900-39, and the archives are complete from 1945 onwards.

The Garrick Club, Garrick Street, London, W.C.2.

Open only to accredited students who are able to obtain special written permission from the Secretary.

Almost half the paintings in the club were collected by the actor Charles Mathews (1776-1835), and 114 drawings were owned by his son Charles James Mathews (1803-78) and presented in 1879; others have been given or bequeathed by members. The pictures depict the history of the English Stage from the period of David Garrick to modern times. They include many famous portraits and scenes by noted artists such as Johann Zoffany, Sir Thomas Lawrence, and Samuel De Wilde. The Library of the club contains a large collection of theatrical books, periodicals, manuscript letters, and playbills.

"A Catalogue of the Pictures in the Garrick Club," edited by C. K. Adams, was published by the Club in 1936.

Pollock's Toy Museum, 44 Monmouth Street, London, W.C.2.

The plates, sheets, and tinsel portraits, etc., originally published by Benjamin Pollock, the Juvenile Drama publisher, have been acquired, and new impressions from the old plates can be purchased.

The Raymond Mander and Joe Mitchenson Theatre Collection, 5 Venner Road, Sydenham, London, S.E.26.

Special permission is required for inspection by appointment.

This collection was founded in 1939 with the aim of covering all aspects of the theatre, opera, and ballet. It has incorporated the theatrical portion of the Randall H. New Collection, which was also a private collection, also the library and personal theatre records which belonged to the late John Parker, who was editor of Who's Who in the Theatre for many years. A veritable museum, it contains engravings, paintings, souvenirs, photographs, china figures, files of programmes of the London and provincial theatres, and a library of several thousand books. It is now used extensively by authors, designers, publishers, B.B.C., and television producers. The collectors have themselves written several books on theatrical and operatic subjects.

The Richard Southern Theatre Collection, Department of Drama, Bristol University, Bristol 8.

Dr. Southern is a theatre consultant, designer, the author of several standard books, and Special Lecturer in Theatre Architecture and Scenery at this Drama Department where his Collection is now permanently housed. The material consists of over ten thousand classified graphic items illustrating the history and modern technique of theatre architecture, stage machinery, and scenic methods in all countries and all periods (including a strong section on Oriental Theatre), together with relevant books, manuscripts, periodicals, films, and transparencies.

The Ellen Terry Memorial Museum, Smallhythe, near Tenterden, Kent.

Open to visitors by appointment.

Established after the death of this great English actress in 1928, it preserves the cottage which was her home for many years and contains a large collection of personal relics.

CENTRES FOR THEATRE RESEARCH

Many aspects of British Theatrical Art and History cannot be studied without a knowledge of the trends and activities in other countries. For this reason the following information is appended. This lists most of the important institutions throughout the world where theatrical records are kept and studied. Before contacting these centres abroad, however, it is often advisable for the student to communicate with the Secretary of the British Centre of the International Theatre Institute, 22 Duchy Street, London, S.E.1.

A SELECTION OF FOREIGN INSTITUTIONS CONTAINING IMPORTANT THEATRICAL COLLECTIONS

United States of America

CALIFORNIA. Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, San Marino, California.

HONOURS IN THE THEATRE

THE Knighthood conferred upon Henry Irving by Queen Victoria in 1895 was the first honour to be received from the Crown by any actor. Irving's position as the head of his profession, and his remarkable record of management of the Lyceum Theatre from 1878, had given him a unique position. His Knighthood was universally acclaimed and he was immensely proud that, through him, the members of his profession had at last received Royal recognition; especially as for nearly five centuries, until the relieving Act of 1824 (5 George IV, C.83) they had been classed under Statute Law as "Rogues and Vagabonds."

During Irving's lifetime, the only other actors similarly honoured were Squire Bancroft and Charles Wyndham. Bancroft received his Knighthood in Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee honours of 1897. Wyndham was Knighted in King Edward VII's Coronation honours, in 1902. Five years elapsed before John Hare was similarly honoured. Since that date, many connected with the theatre and drama have had honours bestowed upon them. Actors, actresses, managers, and dramatists have all been singled out for distinction, although in the case of the dramatists, J. M. Barrie, John Galsworthy, and Professor Gilbert Murray, on whom the Order of Merit was bestowed, they were honoured primarily for their services to literature, and secondly to the drama. Knighthoods were bestowed for similar dual services on Arthur Conan Doyle, F. C. Burnand, and Hall Caine.

In the 1970 Birthday Honours, Sir Laurence Olivier became the first actor to be elected to the House of Lords when he was given a Life Peerage for "Services to the Theatre."

In earlier times many honours had been bestowed on celebrated men intimately connected with the theatre, but these distinctions were always for services in other walks of life. The earliest was probably Sir William D'Avenant, who was knighted for services rendered at the Siege of Gloucester in 1643. Other early familiar names in the annals of the theatre and drama were Sir William Killigrew, Sir Charles Sedley, Sir Lumley Skeffington, the Earl of Orrery (Roger Boyle), Sir Aston Cockayne, Sir David Erskine, the Earl of Lansdowne (George Granville), Sir Robert Howard, Sir John Vanbrugh, Sir Richard Steele, and at a much later date, Edward Bulwer, first Lord Lytton, Lord Newry (later Earl of Kilmorey), Sir Thomas N. Talfourd, the first Lord Tennyson, Sir Theodore Martin, etc.

There have been several instances of titled persons adopting the stage as a profession, including Sir George Power, Bt., Sir Randal Roberts, the 4th Earl Cowley (Arthur Wellesley), the Earl of Rosslyn (as James Erskine), Lord Lyveden (formerly Percy Vernon), Sir William Don, Bt., Sir Basil Bartlett, Bt., etc. Others well known in the world of the theatre were the 3rd Earl of Latham, the Earl of Longford, and Lord Dunsany, who succeeded to their titles.

The first woman to be honoured for services to the stage was the American-born Geneviève Ward, who was created a Dame of the Order of the British Empire in 1921, and she was followed by Ellen Terry, who received the honour in 1925.

OBITUARY

The Reader will find here a note of deaths which have occurred during the period January 1966—July 1971 inclusive, together with a few earlier details not included in previous editions. For all other earlier information, the Fourteenth Edition contains a full necrology and should be consulted.

The Editors would be pleased to hear from anyone who can give more precision to the sometimes indefinite dates given here, so that better information may be given in future editions.

Figures in parenthesis denote age at time of death. The edition given in italics is the last in which a biography appeared.
